didn't work unless the application was set to never go to the background. This is due to the fact that the OSX Alarm application is background only. If you make this the starting app and the OSXAlarm application launches, then it will no longer work. So, make sure it's always set to start when you boot, even if you don't want it to launch. Also, on a few early versions of

Q: Adding the same text to an array and displaying it I am trying to add the same strings to an array of strings, I want it to be able to add into an array and display the result. I am trying to simply load the file in one go, instead of line by line. I've tried a few different ways. Note: Using c++ I've used this method: `ifstream in("play.txt"); std::string line; if(!in){ std::cerr`
