Retrieved 18/07/2014 by including the first and last bits of a message in full; this takes longer than a straight encryption; however, it reduces the chance of a well-informed attacker knowing about the message and being able to pass it along to another agent; this is known as steganography. (formerly Huff-coded steganography) In cryptography, hash steganography (or steganalysing a hash function) is using a cryptographic hash function to hide a piece of data in a block of plaintext. The term steganography has been variously used to describe two different types of hiding of information: (steganography and steganalysing a hash function) In cryptography, when a hash function, or a block cipher (as a special case of a hash function) is modified to make one block of plaintext shorter (or longer) by different amounts, it is called hash steganography. Data hiding has some advantages when the plaintext is a secret. It makes it easy to check whether or not a message is correct, because every block of the plaintext can be checked against the block which came from the message; if the two blocks are the same, the message was correct, if not, the message was not correct. The disadvantage of hash steganography is that the substitution is easily detected,

Baby's First Christmas Baby's First Christmas (alternative title: Bambi's Christmas) is a former Christmas television special about the retelling of The Wonderful World of...musical, originally released on NBC as part of The Wonderful World of Christmas series of specials. The special was directed by Gene Nelson and produced by Greig McNally and Felice Pollock. The special first aired on NBC on December 3, 1979. It continues to air annually on Nickelodeon as a Christmas staple, annually since the show's launch in 1985. The special was nominated for the 1982 Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Children's Program. Plot The special begins with a creepy, eerie arrival of a white creature in a tunnel of trees leading to a Christmas tree decorated with a fondos from Bambi's first Christmas in Acorn Acres. The creature scurries away. A breath of breeze from the creature causes a mist, or snow, to fall down the tunnel. A second creature arrives. It is Smee, a black reindeer, wearing an elaborate red suit with a white deer's head. Smee tries to hand out presents to the raccoons, but they refuse and send him away. Smee's velvet suit is strewn with tears, which the raccoons believe are from snowmen. An unseen voice within Smee's head admonishes him to give the raccoons what he has for the season; Smee sighs and proceeds to a nearby pond and pulls a fish out of it. He opens the red cellophane with his teeth, biting into it, and the fish falls to his feet, its blood dripping out of its mouth. Later, Smee examines the "presents" and finds a fiber blanket for the raccoons. He goes back to the pond and rinses off the fish but his snowy fur turns brown as blood splatters onto him. The remaining raccoons have backed off from their former protective behavior, thinking that Smee is no longer a friend to them. Smee then leaves the raccoons' camp and wand

Ahoy. I'm Mr. Dadish, the Totally Awesome Dad from the Like Totally Awesome Dad series. I brought my kids, Nick and Kale, to work today so we could all bond. Then the evil with-no-name-in-particular thief stole my kids away while I was on the clock with them. Looks like we're all gonna have to do our time together and maybe even find a way to make up for it. Let's face it: being a dad is a hell of a lot of work, and that's why I'm here to find my kids. But let's get serious for a minute: they won't be back until we take on the biggest challenge of our whole career together. So I guess it's time to put the bags under my eyes on 'throwaway.' You ready? About You: You just want to help out. You're about to get to be a dad, too, so it's totally normal to want to be a part of this. You know that letting kids play and learn at an early age is super important, so maybe you'd like to help out in any way you can. Just remember: these are kids we're talking about here. 90 / 10084.6 Gather 'n' Glow is a game about lights, shapes, and your own imagination. To see what a light looks like, press the buttons on the left side of the screen. To place a shape, press the buttons on the right side of the screen. To direct the light to point in the desired direction, use the arrow keys. Upon starting the game, you'll have four types of lights. Each has a color, a shape, and a sound. Use them to earn points! One thing that sets Gather 'n' Glow apart from many similar games is that the shapes you use are not confined to triangles or rectangles. You can use any shape that you like. The only limitation is that the shapes you create must be placed on a level surface (floors, tables, etc.). If you're feeling brave, you can play around with shapes and lights that are pre-programmed into the game by the developers. The game also features a memory system, where your previous score
