“I’m super excited to dive into the depth of the technology available with FIFA 22 – it’s quite an ambitious project,” explained Andrew Ismail, FIFA Games Studio Director at EA. “Motion capture technology has come a long way, and we will be using it to its fullest to bring FIFA to the next level.” “FIFA’s global reach is one of the key reasons why people play the game – the FIFA community has been at the forefront of gaming culture for decades, and this new engine will help build upon that,” said James Stringer, Head of Product Marketing at EA. “The ability to see how the in-game models, environments and gameplay have been rebuilt to enhance the player experience is something we’ve only ever seen in FIFA before – it will open up a new way for fans to interact with their clubs, their favourite players and FIFA itself.” FIFA 22 will support the following new features which will be powered by the new engine.

- New Player Control Players can now move side-to-side using fluid animation. Import the latest real player data – gathered by FIFA’s research and development teams – and use it to power fluid player movements. More specifically, Player AI, Ball Physics and Player Trajectory have been re-tuned using the in-game data.
- Tackle Retries – The key feature of this system is that a player can be tackled only once – the AI will now recognise a tackle attempt and attempt a second or third tackle instead.
- Closer Look at the Pitch – Players can see the entire playing surface as they run through one of the most complex AI systems in the history of sports video games. Players can now step directly off the ball and sprint through the entire pitch – on every surface type.
- Playing Surface Types – In addition to grass, mud and sand – new surfaces such as artificial turf and an all-new stadium (for the first time in a FIFA title) will be available to players. All surfaces can be used for international play, in addition to all leagues, cups, and cup competitions.
- Improved Ball Physics – In addition to making it feel more natural and fluid, the ball physics have been completely overhauled, making it more difficult to score but easier to control the ball. The changed physics are a direct result of the new engine powering the new
