While you might be fine with Facebook using your data, no one wants a corporation to hold onto all your images, videos and personal details for life. This is where a cloud storage service might come in handy. Your data is kept in the cloud, either by a third-party service or your own computer. There are also third-party services that guarantee not to keep your data for more than six months. The problem is that it can cost an arm and a leg. Some services offer a subscription where you pay for just the data, which could cost a lot less. One of the most popular and cheapest services is Google Drive, with its 100GB package costing just $5 per month for two years. This is a drop in the ocean compared to the 500GB offered by iCloud and 1TB of cloud storage by Microsoft's OneDrive. OneDrive offers three different plans with a minimum requirement of 5GB of space for $6.99 per month, $49.99 per year or $99.99 per two years. It also offers a free trial. All you need is a web browser to access your files, and Microsoft has made the service iOS and Android-compatible so you can access all your
