I first saw her at last year's FIFTY8 at the Langham in Los Angeles—she's the modern day modernist you know of when someone mentions chic styling (Gwyneth Paltrow, anyone?), but also an impeccably dressed gal who lives by the, "Fear the unknown." While everyone at the event clearly loves Dazeldon (she got a massive standing ovation), it was her charm that really won over the group. She is a friend, a great conversationalist, and a sucker for a good story. It was her Los Angeles wine fetish that was the cause for much of our laughter that evening. And while she's certainly a master of what she does, she's not afraid to admit it. Dazeldon's Dazedel is a line of modern, yet a little on the "old school" side, mostly because it is made in Japan and because she found a way to bring in heritage-like patterns using mixed media. "We modern girls love a lot of things," Dazeldon told me, "but a lot of people don't understand that it's important to celebrate heritage, whether it be modern." That's why I'm choosing to give away a bottle of each Dazedel design that's made in Japan. One bottle of each is up for grabs, which has them all available as soon as they hit the market. The Giorgio line will be up for purchase in the next month

Vital betatron A vital betatron is a betatron originally built to accelerate a subatomic particle to megaelectronvolts and electronvolts, but with a few megaelectronvolts needed to accelerate to an accelerator at the LHC. The concept is therefore to produce something of size, and power, that can be accelerated to the required megaelectronvolt and electronvolt energies. The concept has been highly successful, but only for a particle, the electron, that has a low mass. Category:Particle acceleratorsQ: How to Handle Not Being Able to Receive Push Notifications From Firebase So I implemented the Firebase client side with the Firebase Android library and everything works, I can receive push notifications. However I do not have the Firebase Server enabled on the project, nor do I have Firebase Realtime Database installed (only the Database branch). I want to do this to utilize the offline capabilities of the app but it means that I won't be receiving notifications. I was hoping that when the application is running in the foreground that the notifications would still be received (since the internet is not required) but that doesn't seem to be the case. My only other thought is that if the application is terminated I assume that it can't receive notifications and I would have to manually send the local notification from the server, which is also not ideal. Has anyone else ever been in a situation like this? What is the best practice for dealing with this scenario? A: Google Firebase Realtime Database can only work if the app is connected to the Internet, as the database server is a backend server of Google Cloud Platform, so, yes, you can only use it if the app is online or able to connect to Cloud Platform. To send offline message you can use push server like a backend of a mobile application or a server you have in your network. FILE - In this Nov. 13, 2017, file photo, demonstrators holding opposing views with the Women's March Against Trump display posters during a rally at Quince Orchard High School in Gaithersburg, Md. The left-leaning advocacy group behind the rally is headed by former members of Women's March organizers who accused their group of anti-Semitism. About a week after the rally on Sunday, June 24, 2018, the group issued a statement apologizing for past anti-Semitic and homophobic statements by co-founder Tamika
