This is my first time to China. I don't know how to buy things online. Is there anyone who can show me?" Wang Long, a young man from Zhengzhou with curly hair and a round face, came to the Sightseeing Guangzhou Mall for the first time and was anxious to purchase a Huawei P20. According to his request, I asked the staff of the mall to search for goods for him, and he successfully purchased a Huawei P20 for about 200 yuan (US$30). After that, he told me that he came to Guangzhou for the first time and that he had never bought anything online before. I suggested that he try using WeChat to buy things online. WeChat is the only necessary platform for modern people to communicate online. In addition, it offers a wide range of services including payments, news and entertainment. But when I asked Wang Long how to buy things online, he was puzzled. "Everything is done in WeChat," said the young man. He hesitated a bit before he continued, "Is there a way to buy things in WeChat?" I told him that there was no such thing, but he didn't believe me. He asked whether it was possible to buy things in WeChat. I replied that it could not, but that he could buy things in WeChat, otherwise, he wouldn't have bought things online in the first place. After thinking for a few seconds, he said, "I will try it!" Lately, the WeChat online store has experienced more and more success, even attracting media coverage and customer comparisons with the Baidu Baihe and JD.com stores. The WeChat online store is a leading payment platform in China and has become the No.1 choice for e-commerce. WeChat and Android Pay have been working together from the very beginning. Android Pay is a platform that only supports payment applications from large corporations such as Alipay, Tencent and WeChat. The newly launched WeChat Online Store was chosen because it had an Android Pay-supported app. According to the statistics of WeChat, Android Pay has made 500 million registrations. It is safe to say that this figure is growing by the day, especially in high-income cities. The announcement of the WeChat online store was made in early September, and it appears that this Compelling evidence that the fibrotic process in human lung is dependent on paracrine effects from resident fibroblasts stimulated by a factor elaborated by pulmonary endothelial cells (PEC) was recently documented (Heesch et al., Proc. Natl. Acad. Sci. USA 88: 9899-9003, 1991). We have demonstrated that lung fibroblasts are programmed by selective survival signals when cocultured with intact PEC. In the current proposal, we build on this important finding and test the hypothesis that PEC stimulate lung fibroblast-derived growth factor-1 (FGF-1) production and that the communication between PEC and fibroblasts are important in the regulation of lung fibrogenesis. The hypothesis is tested by the following specific aims: 1) We will identify PEC stimulators of lung fibroblasts and determine whether these signals regulate fibroblast proliferation or survival. 2) We will determine whether PEC stimulate FGF-1 production by lung fibroblasts and, if so, delineate the mechanism of PEC-mediated induction. 3) We will determine if FGF-1 production by lung fibroblasts is essential to the development of pulmonary fibrosis in murine models and characterize the effects of FGF-1 on fibroblast growth, survival, and matrix production. These aims will test the hypothesis that PEC regulate the growth and survival of lung fibroblasts, in particular by regulating FGF-1 expression. We will also determine the importance of FGF-1 in the development of pulmonary fibrosis. Overall, these studies should enhance our understanding of the regulation of normal pulmonary fibrosis and perhaps develop new therapeutic strategies for ameliorating or reversing pulmonary fibrosis.

1. Field of the Invention
The present invention relates to a method for forming an interconnection structure between metal lines of a semiconductor device, and more particularly, to a method for forming an interconnection structure between metal lines of a semiconductor device, capable of forming an interconnection structure between interconnection layers by lessening an undercut between the interconnection layers. 2. Description of the Prior Art As the semiconductor technology develops, more integrated semiconductor devices are needed to satisfy the demands of product miniaturization. Generally, the quality of the semiconductor devices is closely related to the yield of the manufacturing process, and thus miniaturized semiconductor devices with a high yield can be achieved by improving the manufacturing process. However, one
