The Case-Insensitive, UTF-8 Unicode Collation Algorithm (CIUC) is a case-insensitive, Unicode-based collation algorithm which is suitable for use in a number of languages. It is included as part of the Unicode Collation Algorithm. The algorithm itself is a binary tie-breaker for case-insensitive string comparison for the 16-bit Unicode character set; the resulting collation order is entirely deterministic. For a case-insensitive, binary collation algorithm, in which comparison between strings are based on the ordering of their binary codes, the CIUC is very competitive to the well-established UTF-8 binary collation algorithm. Note that for English-language collation only, the UTF-8 algorithm is more efficient than the CIUC algorithm. The algorithm was originally developed at Microsoft Research in 1998 (see below). The algorithm was introduced to the Unicode Consortium via a proposal from Steve Losh in July 2001. The proposal was accepted in Unicode 5.0, released in 2004, with an explanation of the algorithm and a supplementary appendix to the existing spec. The default collation order returned by the algorithm depends on the LC_COLLATE environment variable. The following table shows the default order for en_US.
