A: There is a trick to solve the red exclamation mark here, I have found. You have to choose "FULL" from the drop down menu when you load your PROJECT. It seems to work but I have not the feeling of this as a good solution... A: I have downloaded the.PRJ file and it will work. To work with the Prolica file, make sure you have the option "convert all references to (and vice versa)" enabled. It can be done from the menu Tools->Preferences->Convert References to Text. Then you can save a.PRJ file and save the.PRI file and convert them. *note: I was using Release 2010 Ultimate Decrease of heme-oxygenase-1 activity after spinal cord transection and promoted spinal cord regeneration by cyclo(His-Pro) or dexamethasone. We previously demonstrated that a small molecule, cyclo(His-Pro) (CHP), has a beneficial effect on regeneration in the spinal cord. Here we sought to evaluate the role of CHP in the modulation of heme-oxygenase-1 (HO-1) and the beneficial effect of CHP on functional recovery after transection of the spinal cord. The effect of HO-1 induction on functional recovery after transection of the spinal cord was assessed by comparing the effects of pharmacological induction of HO-1 by hemin or CHP with those of dexamethasone (Dexa). Protein levels of HO-1 in the spinal cord were determined by western blot. The expression of HO-1 mRNA in the spinal cord was determined by quantitative real-time reverse transcription polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR). The presence of HO-1 was identified by immunohistochemistry. The transcriptional and translational activities of HO-1 were assessed by the expression of a GFP-HO-1 fusion construct, and the enzymatic activity of HO-1 was assayed by the degradation of hemin. The ability of CHP to modify HO-1 activity after spinal cord injury was also examined. The expression of HO-1 in the spinal cord was reduced after spinal cord transection. CHP and Dexa increased the expression of HO-1 in the spinal cord, but hemin had no effect. Hemin and Dexa reduced the HO-1 transcriptional and translational activity and enz
