Ask HN: Is it OK to use Objective C in a new web project? - exedarius I'm looking to write an iPad app using Objective-C. There are already so many web frameworks in JS like react etc. so I'd like to use Objective C to do this.The main reason I want to do this is because I love Objective C and I find it easy to debug. Besides that, it seems harder than writing a lot of JS.Am I right to assume that most people who use React might write JS from the beginning? ====== EnderMB It's a question I've asked myself too, and recently I switched from Vue to React. I'm not sure if that was the right decision, as I feel that I'm struggling to write good maintainable React code, and I'm sure that I will struggle more if I return to Vue in the future. My main reason for moving was that I'm not a fan of JavaScript like I am Objective C. I can write clean JS without any problems, but I struggle to write good organized code with React. I've found that I write better code when I'm not forced to do so. In regards to iOS development, it 0cc13bf012
