I am a new vim user and I would like to preserve the default syntax highlighting when saving a file with an extension that I have changed. I would like this to be enabled even if the file is saved in the default location. For example, if the file was originally saved with the.txt extension, and I save it with the.php extension, I want the default syntax highlighting to come into effect. I am currently using Ubuntu/Gnome.

A: This is called filetype detection, and it is up to the plugin you use to configure it. In your.vimrc just add a line that includes file 595f342e71
