What's new in NERF Legends:

web site), namely the "Silver Little Boy". Front cover art: After arming himself with the Silver Little Boy with a large belt of explosives, Barret would be seen riding into a heavily defended town on the back of a giant metal scorpion. In this story, the town is populated by huge, diseased insects, and Barret is after gold to pay for the reconstruction of Celes' damaged palace. Since village people are unlikely to cooperate with a demon-possessed barbarian, Barret can either negotiate with the townspeople, or plant the explosives and run away (he goes with option two). Barret eventually blows himself up, his bow atop his other gear, to cover his cohort's escape. Two side splash pages: Barret's "son" Lances, who's a bit of a delinquent, actually behaves courageously once he lights his explosive belt on fire: he rushes into town armed only with his catapult to take his older brother by surprise. The two of them then spring an ambush on the giant insects, rocket-ramming and exploding several of them in the process. To cover their escape, Lances hits the big bugs with his catapult, while Barret pilots a gigantic scorpion to safety using the remote-control vehicle he commandeered earlier. Optional Anti-Marine cover credits: If you have your game turned on

"Anyone But The Marines", you can choose to remove the cover credits from "Naval Action", as well as to increase the value of the "Anyone But The Marines" badge. .Influence of limb dominance on strength, rate of strength development, and tear film stability in humans. The purpose of the study was to compare shoulder strength, rate of strength development, and tear film stability in subjects with and without a history of shoulder injuries. Twenty-seven clinically healthy males, ages 25-50 years, had either a history of shoulder injury (5 subjects; Injury group) or no history of shoulder injury (22 subjects; Con-injury group). Maximal isometric force, rate of force development (DFD), and tear film break time (BF-timer) were assessed for the elbow flexors and extensors of both arms. DFD and BF-timer were derived from a single maximal-effort isometric contraction by using a hand-held dynamometer. Strength and DFD were similar for the uninvolved arm of the
