Nitro Pro V9.0.3.2 (x86-x64) With Key [TorDigger] is a full pack of software that is designed with a user. Nitro Pro V9.0.3.2 (x86-x64) With Key [TorDigger] Serial Key KeygenQ: Oozie 3.0.1 workflow submit script didn't print log output I'm trying to run a simple oozie workflow with following steps: hive: insert into hive_table where... we can confirm oozie workflow script print out from oozie logs hadoop fs -ls -R -R -H /foo/bar hadoop fs -ls -R -H /foo/bar I used command oozie workflow submit --split-by hive:count --queued to submit the oozie workflow. And the oozie workflow script didn't print out any error or error message. I also used command oozie jobs -list to check whether the result oozie workflow was completed successfully and no oozie workflow process are running. I tried to run the oozie workflow on cluster with this step hadoop fs -ls -R -H /foo/bar and it seems that the result was failed, the command oozie jobs -list doesn't list the oozie workflow and oozie process jobs. If no one knows the cause, I appreciate any suggestion. Thank you. A: It turned out the workflow completed successfully when the job request was placed by the user using queue instead of sending it to the queue from oozie workflow submit command. Q: How do I see the local time as a human? I know what the time is. I know when the city where I live is in a different timezone. But what I'm interested in is viewing the time from that city as a local human, in a text field (with the time added in the format I'd expect), in a web page (so that it's visible immediately to users without having to download anything). For example, if I see the time in Seattle as either 2011-01-01T16:48:48-05:00 or 2011-01-01T16:48:48.267967+01:00 (which would be a format you could display on a webpage), I know what it is
