It relates in particular to the continuous and automated measurement of the position of the centers of a number of small microscopical point light sources arranged in a predetermined pattern on the surface of an object. The invention is applicable in the field of biotechnology. Thus, for example, the invention can be used for the automated monitoring of enzymes that act in the growth of cells on surfaces, in which case it is possible to determine automatically the position of the centers of the light sources or of the centers of light-emitting diodes. The invention is also applicable in the field of optics, for example in the position of the centers of the axes of optical elements, such as lenses and mirrors, on the surface of an object. The invention relates more particularly to a method for the automated measurement of the position of a point on the surface of an object by using one or several point light sources or point light-emitting diodes, the position being measured using a detection system of the type using a number of receivers, these receivers being spaced apart from one another by a fixed distance, each receiver being sensitive to the light energy emitted

You can now try the new features..Q: Arduino RGB LED Madness I've got a UNO and a set of 3 RGB LEDs. The code I'm using has RGB values for each LED. When I run the code the first LED turns on all 3, the second LED stays at the same value, and the third LED stays black (I think that's the right term). (1) I'm pretty new to Arduino programming and in general, but I was under the impression that adding together 3 numbers should equal the color specified in the RGB code. (2) I need to be able to pass any RGB value to any 3-LED setting, and any value is fine. I understand how to do this using several buttons, but that's beyond my scope for right now. I'm sure there are easier ways to do this, but if I need to spend hours making a custom-built circuit to get this working I 6d1f23a050
