growth factor-beta (TGF beta) may be inhibited by other mediators that are produced by the cells, among which hydrocortisone is a candidate. Cells of the murine embryonal fibroblast cell line PYS 2 produce a conditioned medium that inhibits the mitogenic action of TGF beta on cells of the same line. The effect of hydrocortisone on the inhibitory activity of this conditioned medium was evaluated. Hydrocortisone induced dose-dependent inhibition, reaching maximal activity at a 1.0

mM concentration. The effect was time- and concentration-dependent, requiring 24 hr to reach the maximal response, and was not due to the glucocorticoid activity of hydrocortisone. Desonide, a topically active corticosteroid, was effective as was dexamethasone, another corticosteroid. The action of hydrocortisone was blocked by cycloheximide, suggesting that protein synthesis is essential for the process. Suppression of hydrocortisone-induced inhibition by aminoglutethimide, an inhibitor of TGF beta, suggests that TGF beta is a key mediator.

Hydrocortisone may be a mediator in the many diseases for which TGF beta is a candidate mediator. The City of Calgary is facing a $35,000 bill after a flag flew in Lake Bonavista on Sunday.
