Download the whole playlist here: In this course, you'll learn how to test human immune responses in vitro – i.e., in a dish – by growing T-cells and exposing them to different types of antigens. You'll learn how to measure T-cell activation and proliferation with ELISpot, and study how T-cell subsets contribute to immunity using flow cytometry. You'll investigate how exogenous growth factors affect T-cell differentiation into various lineages and how T-cells interact with antigen-presenting cells and other immune cells. Subscribe: My latest in-depth video: Twitter: Facebook: Instagram: Website: This is a lesson about anaphylaxis, an acute allergic reaction. Learn how to avoid this type of reaction! For more information on this topic visit the Innate Immunity site: For more about the immune system visit: Michael Palladino – www.michaellipalladino.com

remember the very first video I remember watching that talked about the immune system. The video described how it works, how these cells found in our blood actually tell our body what to do. In my life, I've actually found and discovered that there are many things that keep us alive in this world and though most of them do, none of them are better than the next or more essential and, often, we make them into a scam or a demon. I try my best to explain the most important, most essential, all-around-healthy things that we need to enjoy and lead a full life in this 6d1f23a050
