"My dad died, so I could [draw her]" Right before she turned 9, Luann gave herself a piece of paper and started making little sketches of her father—Jose—when he was alive. Now, Luann has been painting portraits of Jose for more than ten years. "I'm working on my fourth one," she tells InStyle. "My mom has some of them up in the house. They all have a little light in them. For me, that's the most important thing." One of Luann's most recent paintings captures the love she has for her dad and his lovable smirk, which appears in many of the portraits she's done. "My dad had a smile like he was happy to be alive. It made me want to be happy." Having a father that was an artist gave Luann a strong artistic instinct, and she says her dad would let her draw on his sketch pad or his workstation. "My dad was a painter, so I would watch him paint and I would watch him draw. He'd always show me his sketch pad and draw on it. I grew up watching him paint." Share this story with all your friends.
