Lasercut 41Towards guidelines for developing occupational profiles of diagnoses, jobs, and working conditions of psychological disorders. Occupational psychologists often have to deal with multi-dimensional health care demands. The lack of an objective, integrated assessment procedure, however, hampers the development of guidelines for improving the occupational context of health care for patients with psychological disorders. To develop guidelines for developing occupational profiles of patients with psychological disorders, we combined a job analysis with a diagnoses task force. Three different methods were used to obtain diagnoses from experts. These diagnoses were combined with the job analysis. Working conditions were evaluated by experts. We compared five models that incorporate different combinations of data sources and analyses. We propose a method integrating diagnosis, job analysis, and working conditions in one model. We evaluated the quality of this model with respect to the reliability and the concordance of the resulting profiles and showed that the quality of the profile c6a93da74d
