download youtube videos in firefox for windows, mac, and linux. firefox add-ons can make downloading videos faster, easier, and safer. because we rely on browser add-ons, we can't show you the best way to download videos in firefox. however, the videos below should give you some ideas. almost all youtube users are familiar with the youtube video downloader extension, which allows you to download videos on youtube. but we already have the official extension for firefox and it does exactly the same thing. this extension will work automatically and in no time, it will download your favorite videos from the website to your hard drive. there is no need for extra software, as the extension can be used with firefox or chrome. this browser is efficient and valuable for users planning to download videos playing on their website directly to their computers. the video downloader professional allows the user to save videos they are watching to their computers. with this downloader, the user can add videos to their favorite list to watch or download later. currently, the downloader is compatible with video streaming websites such as vimeo and youtube, which are the most common video streaming sites. if youre using safari youll find that theres no obvious command for capturing streaming youtube videos, but it can be done with the browsers built-in tools provided that youre downloading a flash file. for example, navigate to a youtube video you want to capture and start it playing. press command-option-a to produce safaris activity window. in this window youll see the name of the video followed by the word youtube. in the list of links below look for an entry of several megabytes that appears to be loading. option-double-click on it and it will download to your mac as an flv file. as mentioned earlier, you can then play this file with a third-party tool. unfortunately, you cant download mpeg-4 files using this method. for those files, turn to firefox or a third-party tool.
