I'd like to know if someone could refer me to some other program that can retrieve lost files. I used to play a game for 2 years (I know, I'm a cheater) and it took me 2 years to get a new hard disk drive. And this time I lost a lot of files so I'm trying to find a tool that can retrieve lost files. Though I didn't find a workable way, I'm still trying. Then I came across Hiren's BootCD and I'm really amazed. It looks exactly like a windows and can support all my 100+ programs. It's very user friendly, just like all their products I have used so far. I wish the author and team could see this (ps I recommend Hiren's BootCD to everyone) :) If your hard drive is password protected, Hiren's Boot CD can retrieve deleted files from it. If you have a lot of files to recover from your hard drive, the tool can scan and give you a list of the files that it has found. It's similar to a backup file or simple file system. You just need to download and boot Hiren's BootCD, and then you are ready to shred all your lost files Every new hard drive sold has a randomly assigned password. These passwords can not be easily guessed or hacked. In the past, if a drive was reformatted or a new OS installed, the password can not be reset. HD Unlock Wizard is a software that helps you remove and recover lost or forgotten HDD passwords. It works for both Windows and Linux operating systems. I used the same software to remove HDD password and it worked well. Since it was a 60 GB slave drive I inserted it into another computer and used a Linux system to reinstall grub. Then I reinserted the drive into my computer and I was able to access it. Below is what I did. First, I booted up to a Linux distro using it's Grub. I plugged the HD in and opened the HDD password utility. I set my password to "password" and then reinserted the drive. After I set the drive password I rebooted back into Windows. Then I plugged the drive in and the drive password utility automatically found my drive, removed the password, and made the drive accessible again.
